

A highlight of the wrestling program had to be the exciting wrestling tournament in which many campers participated. I am positive that every camper who was in the tournament will never forget one second of his match (es) in the tournament.

There were twenty-four matches in six different weight classes. A large crowd attended all tournament competition.

MISCELLANEOUS TRAILS

BEWARE: You are about to enter one of the strangest groups of trails. It has many unexpected hazards. If you should contact one be sure to stop off at the Infirmary.

If you should become lost, stop off at the office. If you should become hungry, stop off at the mess hall to relieve your hunger. While you're there, pick up a copy of THE TRAILS TALES and entertain yourself.

OFFICE

This year the office space has doubled in size because a section of the divider was taken out, and we took over the old first-aid room. There's now enough room for all of the equipment and visitors. However, we don't know how long our "breathing room" will last, as the lost and found box is rapidly multiplying and taking over.

The addition of a second typewriter this year has left us with one to use--most of the time!

Perhaps the most-used piece of equipment in the office is the Pepsi machine. Everyone gave a cheer when it arrived and moans when it's empty. Guess that's a sign of success!

THE KITCHEN

Upon being asked to write something about the kitchen we gave it some thought and came up with almost nothing. However, the kitchen must be remembered so here's our contribution:

The cooks (Anne Towne, Norma Synder, Avis Kienert, and Jane Dulski) acted as our counselors, so to speak. Keeping us in line and preventing us from doing anything too drastic was part of their job as well as doing the cooking. However, even with their constant guidance and supervision, we still managed to find amusement and adventure.

One of those events was the Camp Waupaca Kitchen Semi-Weekly Flood. This occurred whenever unwatched buckets and "bug juice" overflowed.

Coolers were forever being locked when we were in them. If that weren't bad enough, the jailer would turn off the lights.

Aside from the fact that we were shocked at the first sight of how many dishes 185 people can make, and that the campers never did learn that one can't have peanut butter and jelly for every meal, we all have experienced memorable moments, some more memorable than others. For the most part, we have certainly enjoyed this summer.

INFIRMARY

At nine a.m., in the green building on the hill, you'd think that cabin clean up was limited to the infirmary, because all the campers (maybe not quite all) are gathered there with their problems from yesterday.

There were many attractions at the infirmary this year! One of the most popular items was the throat spray--all you had to do was open wide and gag while Rose Mary sprayed. Toenail and fingernail clipping day was loved by all (wasn't it fellows?). And days of the week are kept track of by allergy shots (always given on Friday). PHischex has become a new word in each camper's vocabulary. Also, there's a waiting line for the big white pan that soaks toes. The big treat is going to see the camp doctor because you go into town!

However, Rose Mary thinks it has been a good summer in the infirmary because of the great bunch of fellows she has had to care for. She has a special feeling for the little campers, the big campers, and the middle-sized campers. In other words, the campers at Camp Waupaca are just the greatest!
