

OLYMPICS

The 1973 Camp Waupaca Olympics actually began several days before the flags were unfurled at the waterfront during the traditional opening ceremonies. Preparations for shirt designs and scheduling kept many members of the staff occupied for the greater part of the fourth week of camp. The silk screens used for printing the Olympic shirts were made by Jessie Clinging-smith once again this summer. The talents of Paul Warshauer once again enabled the Greek God Zeus to appear at the opening ceremonies. As Olympic runner Rich Trester completed the lighting of the torch on Friday morning, we were set for the finest and most competitive Olympics at camp in several years.

The opening event saw Ken Saunders and Randy Refkin win gold medals for USSR in the Marathon canoe competition. From that point on, Mike Chavin's USSR team took off on their way to the Olympic championship. Highlighting the first day of games were the gold medals won in two of the most difficult and demanding events scheduled during the 36 hours of Olympic competition. In the Track Pentathlon, winning the gold medal was Steve Taslitz of Israel; in the regular pentathlon, winning the gold medal was Howard Gartzman of USA.

During the morning, competition consisted of individual events in small craft, golf and tennis, with junior team competition in riflery, archery and the Marathon Relay & Tri-Skill. The Friday afternoon activities were divided between the waterfront and the Basketball, Field Sports and Hockey preliminary matches. Evening activities on Friday included wrestling, the finals of the tennis elimination tournament, archery and the pre-liminary rounds of the junior basketball tournament. At the close of the first day, a special sportsmanship presentation by each team helped to set the tone of the closing ceremonies at the horseshoe campfire. Winning special recognition for their presentations were Mark Fishbein of France (gold), Jim Veltman of Israel (silver) and Bill Engerman of Japan (bronze).

The Saturday games were once again started with a march to the waterfront and an opening address by Paul Warshauer. Featured on Saturday morning were events in riflery, volleyball, line-soccer and one of the most exciting new events The All Nation Marathon. During the afternoon all of the team sports final matches were played just before the competition in track and field. The final events scheduled for the evening were postponed due to poor weather conditions, but the closing ceremonies in their place featured an additional event which may become a tradition for future Olympic competition. Each nation presented a closing statement in which they expressed their appreciation for the spirit that prevailed throughout all of the 1973 Olympic competition. Winning special recognition for their closing statements were Stan Friedell of Italy (gold), Jim Veltman of Israel (silver), and Coach Ray Krysh of USA (bronze). In all, the Olympics were closed in the same spirit with they were originally founded--the true spirit of sportsmanship for the honor of country and the glory of sport.

A special thanks to Jessie Clingingsmith for his patience and long hours spent in designing the Olympic silk screens for use in printing the team shirts.

A special thanks to Wayne Towne for his effort in bringing to the camp Olympics the finest medals we have ever awarded. His long hours spent designing and engraving made the 1973 medals well worth treasuring.

A special thanks to Dick Van Dyke for his long hours spent at the piano recording the Olympic theme for use throughout the games; also for his efforts in bringing a new touch to the presentation of medals by performing a national theme for each gold medal presented.

A special thanks to Paul Warshauer for descending from Mount Olypmus for our opening ceremonies; also for his efforts in decorating the Dining Hall and presenting a fine opening address both Friday and Saturday at the waterfront.

A special thanks to all of the coaches. Because of their enthusiasm and concern, the 1973 Camp Waupaca Olympics were a tremendous success.

JIM COEN

Buster Brown and Ruff jumped out to a commanding three game lead in the Midwest World Series and hung on to win the title in six hard fought contests. Following the loss of Blake Horwitz, Buster Brown faltered slightly in the 4th and 5th games--allowing the Wipe-Outs to challenge. By virtue of a tight 2-run softball victory in the sixth game, Buster Brown stopped the series before the up and coming momentum of Wipe-Out could overtake them. For his outstanding hustle and sportsmanship both on and off the field, Jimmy Coen was named the winner of the Brian Piccolo Sportsmanship Award.

2: DAVE SHABELMAN & PHIL BLACKMAN

Just as did teams in the Midwest and Western Division, Four Day Wonder jumped out to a 3-0 lead first before wrapping up their Series with a tight softball win in game #5. After suffering three straight defeats, Hokan's Heroes managed a last ditch effort to pull out a 29-26 rugby game. All throughout the Series, however, it was the tandem of Mike Berke and Bryan Friedman that kept Four Day Wonder out in front. For their outstanding sportsmanship during the Series both Dave Shabelman & Phil Blackman were awarded the Brian Piccolo Sportsmanship Award

After dropping the first game of the Series in basketball, Uncola came on to win four straight and capture the championship in the Eastern division World Series. It was a close first game and a close final game, but between those two battles, it was all Uncola. The Bug Killers were definately hurt by the loss of Ralph Saunders and though they seemed to be coming around in the final game, it was just too late. Both Gary Stone & Scott Wolfe were designated as winners of the Brian Piccolo Sportsmanship Award. Along with Dave Shabelman of the Central Division, Gary Stone was also a recipient of this award one year ago.

In the only four game sweep ever recorded in the two year history of the Waupaca World Series, the Septic Men rolled over Robbin's Hoods to capture the Western Division title. Led by Craig Bernfield and Brad Ashman, Sullivan's Septic Men crushed their opposition in every game of the Series. Such great individual efforts as turned in by Bernfield and Ashman were matched by outstanding teamwork and a hustling defense in both rugby and softball. Robbin's Hoods just couldn't get it all together. A collection of fine players on both sides, but a clean sweep for the Septic Men nonetheless. On the losing side of the Series some great team efforts were turned in by Dave Cohen and Ben Fox and Darren Schulman and Jon Reder. Sullivan's Septic Men had the momentum from the word go--and they were simply not to be denied in 1973. The Brian Piccolo sportsmanship Award went to Craig Bernfield, with Geoff Altman a close second.

Northern Division World Series.
This was the only series going the distance in a year of one-sided contests. And in a very heated confrontation, the Puppies emerged victorious. For his outstanding sportsmanship and team leadership, the Brian Piccolo Award went to Steve Alex.
His team spirit and determination
