ARCHERY

The first four weeks in Archery was filled with many new and exciting learning experiences. We experimented with sky-shooting, distance target shooting, and shooting at dollar bills and canteens.

The M-W-F class was assisted by Eric Goldstein who could "shield" perfectly. Members of the class included Scott Macomber, who owned the "shield," Mike Shea, who attended every class every day and showed great skill, and little Dan Jelinek who arrived without any previous knowledge and ended up being a pretty good shot.

The T-Th-S class, first period, was the largest yet we had some of the bests archers. Jon Gordon, my assistant and paper reader was very helpful. Other members were Scott Levine, Matt Silverstein, Steve Mandrea, Curtis Claus, Ryan Sturch, and Ricky Spritz, (who was also known as the "magazine kid." My other class was small but contained powerful archers, too. Jon Kaulentis, Dan Oseran & Josh Beim were among the "top flight archers." Mike McKay, Mike Jelinek & Mike Shea took the 4th hour "hot under the sun class."

Second four weeks the archery range didn't seem to be the most exciting place to be, however, despite the heat and few places to hide from the sun's harsh rays, it turned out to be a popular place! Not only during classes, but often familiar faces like Matt Silverstein & Matt Tenney would visit the range.

Many campers were "aces in archery." The best included Sean Fox, David Rattner, Lukas Gelman, Eric Marder, Chad Kasdin, Jon Schulkin, & Jon Gordon. Some of the campers made incredible progress: Andy Orloff, Todd Kleeblatt, Loren Friedman, A.J. Coleman, Jeff Kurtz, Steve Wolf & Paul Wine. Certainly the most improved shooter was Jonathan Merel, who by the end of the season, was a regular Robin Hood!

Among the more memorable activities were the many sky shooting exhibitions. The top sky shooter was Chad Kabins. Other activities were the sight of Lukas Gelman's compound bow, the loss of two dollars by Paul Warshauer to two bow wielding campers in one day, and the frantic attempt to keep unbroken arrows on the range!

Through the summer the campers seemed to have fun at archery, and I must admit that our game has also improved. Thanks to all the kids for making archery a success. And a special thanks to Jon Gordon for all his extra help!

BASEBALL

Apple Pie, Mom, and Baseball. It's simply the American way of life and twenty-two youngsters participated in the Camp Waupaca- Tom Ames, Chris Malcolm All American baseball class during the first four weeks of camp. It was an eventful class and as we look back a few moments stand out.

Ricky Spritz rounds second base...losing both shoes! Ed Schotz thunderous blasts to deep right field, also known as hole one of the golf course. Jon Gordon's miraculous catches with his eyes opened half the time. Jason Drexler's blasts that occasionally left the infield. Jon Kully's day as team captain and start shortstop with a few errors in one inning. Mike Jelinek's constant urge to charge the mound, or the batter, or whomever! Bobby Hirsch's endless supply of hustle, never griping, always smiling. Scott Rubin's wise but annoying habit of swinging at every first pitch. The immediate response by the outfield to back up whenever Mike "Boomer" Schulte or Jon "Bambino" Newman approached the plate. The list goes on. And yet, as we look back, the guys favorite memory will be the dining hall water faucet that awaited us after every hot class period

. During the second four, the boys who roughed it out to the sizzling fields showed real grit. Scott Macomber, Adam Wolff, Scott Fox, and Jon Gordon were always ready to play. Randy Weiss gets the Mr. Hustle Award, Harlan Cohen gets the "No Argue" award for never questioning any calls. Stephen Berg receives the "No Cuss" award while Chad Lurie awarded himself the Player of the Year.

Hitting, during the second four weeks was the element we wanted the boys to excel at. Hitting is the real key! Take Shelby Leland, or Jon Less for example. Two fine sluggers who always drew oohs and ahhs from the crowds. Or those expert placement hitters who hit the ball where its pitched: The Simon brothers, Matt & Dave come to mind.

Then there's fielding. Fielders like Jason "Hot Corner" Zaremski or Mike "The Acrobat" Goldberg make the sport great. So, I guess that's what I'm saying. Forget what I said about hitting. I was lying there. Fielding is the key.

There's hustle, too, though. What about all those guys who play their hearts out and always run, not walk out to the field. Boys like Brian Eggener, Brian Farkas, Jeff Levine, and David Rattner. To these guys, hustle is everything, so scratch what I said about hitting and fielding because that's a hoax. Hustle is the key!

Wait a minute, what about having fun? What about A>J> Coleman' and David Rattner and Larry Tarschis and Andy Wanty and Dan, "Another World" Jelinek? What about the fun they have and the smiles they wear and the laughter they emit? Forget about hustling, and fielding and hitting. Scratch that! Clean slate Having fun, that's what softball is all about!

BASKETBALL

The first four weeks of Basketball class consisted of the following boys: Jon Torshen, Eric Goldstein, Scott Levine, Scott Macomber, Dan Drexler, Jeff Ptak, Scott Berland, Andy Kaplan, Steve Geman, Bobby Hirsch, & Ricky Spritz. The majority of class time was spent in actual play with less time on fundamentals & drills. The class did some work on lay-ups and jump shots. The class showed much interest in a game called "cut throat." Jon, "Flying glasses" Torshen showed great ability when his spectacles left his face. Eric Goldstein hit many long range shots and Jeff Ptak made some inside moves that would make Kareem envious. Dan Drexler and Scott Berland played well when they weren't wrestling on the side lines. Bobby Hirsch, Scott Levine, & Steve Geman showed good shooting ability and Ricky Spritz had some good moves when he remembered to wear tennis shoes to class.

Overall, the four weeks of basketball class was filled with fun and exciting basketball games. Though it was hot on the courts, the boys showed great enthusiasm. Thanks!

The second four weeks were filled with intense games as well as fabulous moves that would make Michael Jordan look un-coordinated! Throughout the 3 weeks of class, there were drills, games and loads of fun. Marc Stein, Dan Drexler, Harlan Cohen, Greg Cohen, Randy Weiss, Josh Abrams, Scott Berland, and Scott Fox played many games for "sport."

Some of these games were not sanctioned by the commissioner of BB. Adam Wolff & David Klow were impressive in their abilities on court. Ryan Rosenthal, Mike Mandel, & Scott Macomber played well when they weren't arguing. Aaron Siegel and Jordan Batt, despite their height amazed the class with their dazzling moves. Brian Eggener, Mike Schneider, and Scott Johns played well when motivated. Ronnie Goldgerg, Andy Ettinger, David Engel, and Andy Evans played hard and with incredible intensity.

In the other class we had a very hot start. The team improved greatly in the areas of passing and fast breaks. Jeff Levine, and Shelby Leland won All-Around Basketball Awards. Danny Murray won most improved player award. The rebounding and defense was exceptional.

Overall, the basketball classes were very fun. The campers showed much interest in playing and we were all sorry the classes had to end!

BICYCLES

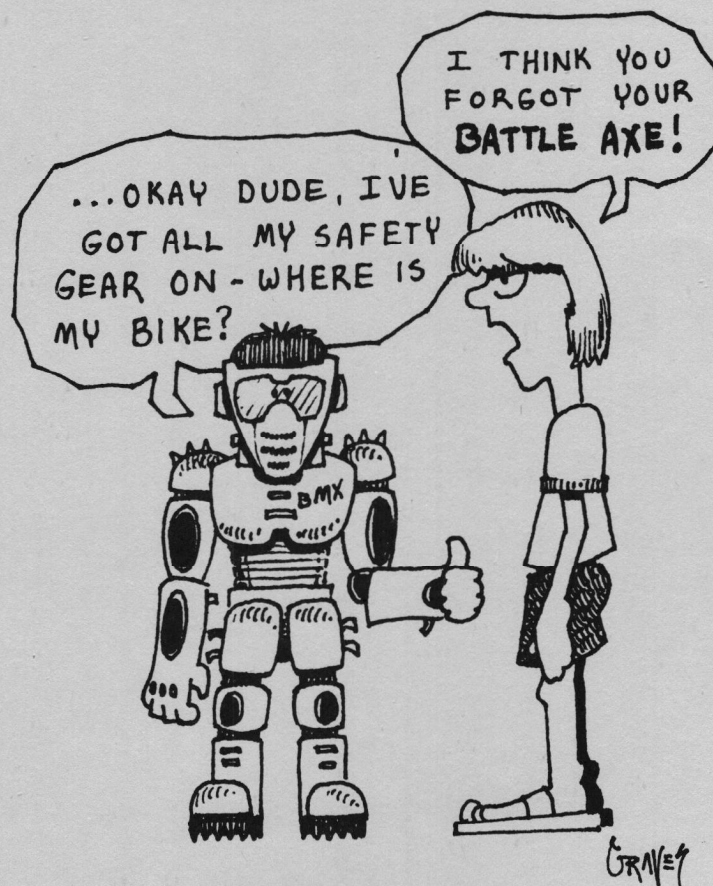

Bicycling was exciting during the first four weeks as we "kicked off" the first annual Tour de Campe. Riders competed in three events and were recognized for best overall times and most improved.

In the Do-It-In-The-Dirt Time Trial, Mike Gordon put in the best time with 23:67. Second was Jon Newman posting a 25:28. In the Prairie Pylon Stage, Alex Jacobs sprinted for an amazing record of 15:90 while Mike Gordon was second with 16:07. The Quasi-Moto Criterium Stage was won by Mike Gordon, Jon Newman and Jon Gordon. Mike Gordon won the overall Tour de Camp with most improved honors going to John Kaulentis.

In the second section there included a scrappy bunch of bikers. Plenty of new talent waited to be harnessed in a competition that would be tough for the average biker. After days, (OK, hours!) of road work, the riders tested their strength in the Tour de Campe. Overall, Scott, "White Lightning" Macomber won the three events with a time of 1:31:57. Brett Weissman was second, and Brian Schneider was third. Jason Drexler gets special attention as "Top Hustler" because of his determination.

Seasoned veteran Mike Shea showed off his experience in the off road work-outs while Jon Provus demonstrated intestinal fortitude as he was riddled with mishaps. Next stop: '88 Olympics in Seoul.

Let it be said that when Aylesworth and Gaupers get together to teach bicycling during the second four, we knew it would be a piece of cake!

There were five nervous campers standing next to their sleek Camp Waupaca racing machines. These guys looked like drivers education students ready to hop into Porsche Turbo Carreras.

Bobby Berland, Jon Venetos, Chris Roben, and Ryan Leiber began their biking adventure that first day with a series of demanding skill development events that gave them the necessary talents to survive the next three weeks. There were the usual gut-busting Tour de Campe events topped by the ultimate test of courage, stamina and stupidity with a ride down "Suicide Hill."

Congrats go out to Bobby Berland for winning the Tour de Campe for this period.

BOATING

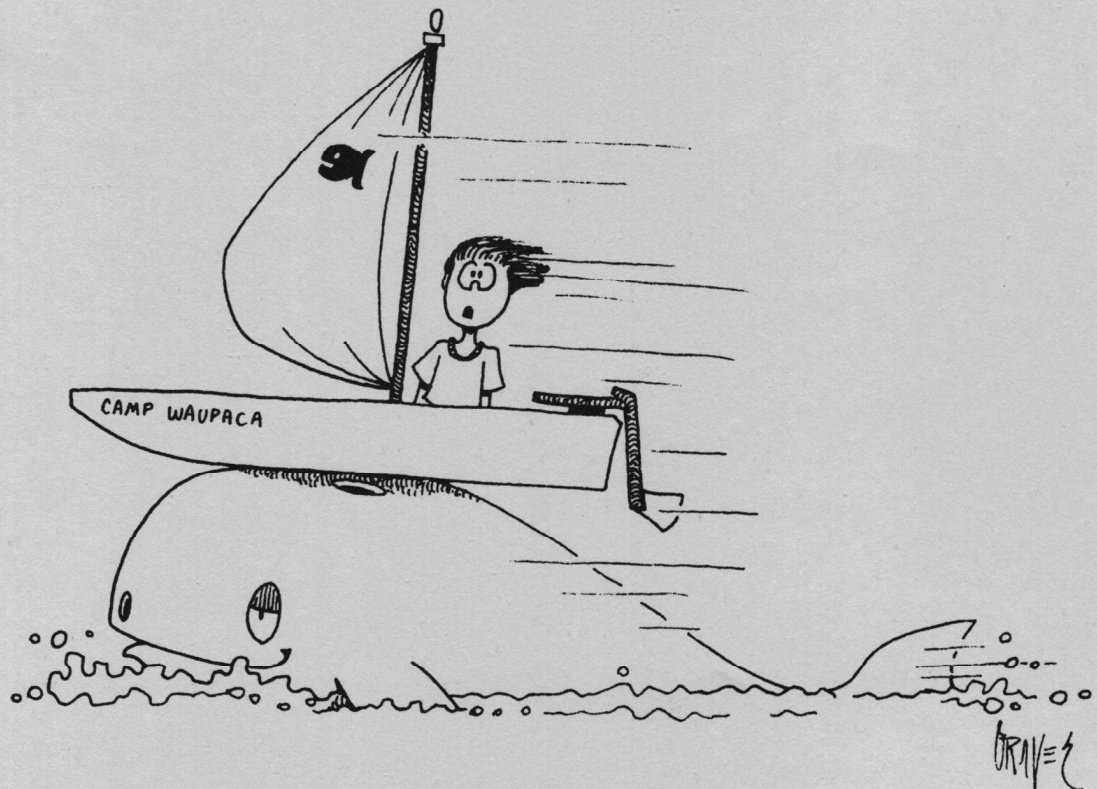

This four weeks in Boating was filled with excitement. Many kids thought there were too many weeds for boating in beautiful crystal-clear, sandy bottomed, little Lake Stratton, but the instructors showed them otherwise!

One of the major highlights included an exciting excursion to Big Lake Stratton in search of Big Moe on an alternate route to the Orient. Marc Portugal & Corey Kasdin reported unconfirmed sightings of the infamous amphibian. Another highlight was the Stratton Lake playak relay which came down to the final two boaters, Marc Cohen & Mike Zimmerman, the victor by a nose. Some of the rest of the winning crew included Corey Kasdin, Mike Goldberg, Steve Wolf, Paul Wine, Brian Grabiner & Matt Isreal.

On the lighter side, one of the funniest things to happen was Matt Isreal & Brian Grabiner's paddle boat journey which left them helplessly stuck in the tricky weeds for most of 1st period until they were rescued by our own Dave Hillman.

In addition to having fun, most of the boys learned some of the fundamentals of safe boating and the art of sand sculpturing.

BROADCASTING

Broadcasting was a new class this year and was quite an experience!

It was the first year we ever tried to do a radio class. We had some very good "personalities." Marc Weiner, Brian Schneider, Dave Isreal & Jason Harris were the outstanding DJ's who worked on radio skits, voice-overs, commercials, shows, & impersonations.

Danny Jelinek, Dave Simon, & Matt Isreal were the sports class. They commented, gave information, and also worked on some shows.

Some memorable commercials were Dumb Cookies by Danma, and Bartyles & Jaynes Cheesburgers. Who could forget the day Dave Simon memorized Box #10 by Jim Croce. We didn't get as far as we had hoped for, but we did a great job! Waupaca Wisc., WAUP where Rock it is!
